Claire Must Pay Heavily For Love Theft

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 15.—A verdict that blonde Claire Windsor of the stage and screen stole the love of Alfred C. Read, Jr., handsome former Oakland broker, was returned yesterday by a jury. The verdict, suit of his divorced wife, Marian Young Read, who was awarded $75,000 of the $100,000 damages she asked. "It is outrageous," the actress said, her face flushed. "I don't see how I ever could pay $75,000. My lawyer's attorneys said they would appeal. Mrs. Read received the verdict with both smiles and tears. Spectators applauded.

The verdict was returned a few minutes after the jury had called for love letters and other exhibits in the case, which grew out of a chance meeting of Read and the actress in a rooming house on an east-bound transcontinental train in September, 1931.

Read's mother, Mrs. Alfred Read, Sr., of Oakland, testified Wednesday Read was the possessor of a convincing "love" and was solely responsible for the suit.

"Miss Windsor did not alienate my son's love," she testified. "Two people did that—the mother and the daughter. The mother said the younger Mrs. Read was 'horribly jealous'."

DRUMMELLER GIRL BURNS TO DEATH IN BLAZING HOME

Child Pours Oil on Slushgish Fire While Parents
Absent—Three Brothers Escape Flames Which Destroy Home.

DRUMMELLER, Alta., Sept. 15.—Alma Florence Shaver, 15-year-old daughter of Mrs. George Shaver, was burned to death Thursday in a fire which completely razed her home west of Rowley, near here. The fire started when the girl poured coal oil on a slushgish fire to prepare the evening meal for her three brothers. No other children were hurt.

Corporal Moriarty of the R.C.M.P. at Drummeller was called to the scene of the tragedy. Returning he met the mother and stepfather of the girl on the highway and informed them of their loss. Mr. and Mrs. Carr had spent the day at Drummeller.

According to police, flames shot from the kitchen stove and caught the girl's clothing after she had poured coal oil upon the fire. The flames rapidly enveloped the child, burning her to death. Her body was found in the bed-room window but the darting flames frustrated the rescue attempt.

Charred remains of the girl were found in the basement among the ruins of the home some hours after the fire had burned out.

Report From Lethbridge

LETHBRIDGE, Alta., Sept. 15.—Break-up of the Christian community of the universal brotherhood of Doukhobors would not be a surprise to those close to the sect, according to reports published by the Lethbridge Herald. The paper adds information it has obtained shows such a step might occur soon.

"There seems to be a spirit of discontent among the members of the community," the paper adds.

"The iron hand that held the thousands of Doukhobors in fear and almost servile obedience for many years seems to have passed on with the death of Peter Vereggin the first. Peter the younger, present head of the sect, seems to lack the sure grip of his famous father."

"Rumors coming from the Doukhobor colonies are that the community is in a state of confusion and the younger element, although not confined to this group and a wariness with community life is given as a fruitful source of the revival spirit. The leadership of the sect is in a state of confusion, not to the liking of many and the cry for a change is heard in the colonies."

ONE WAY TO STABILIZE

Mr. Bennett says—quite correctly—that European countries which formerly depended on foreign supplies of food are now growing their own wheat because of fear. Fear that war may come and blockade their ports; or that the countries might hold them up for ransom prices while they were fighting for their lives.

Canada cannot guarantee European countries against war, or the interruptions to traffic that may war entail. But we might do something in the way of promising to not raise our price of supply and figure, on condition that the former importing countries stop forcing home production of wheat by stop, by force, and cut their tariffs down to a commercial level.

And why not? If individuals can make long term contracts, and keep them, nations can do the same thing. They do this in respect to such important matters as preserving neutrality or taking up arms under specified conditions. If Canada is in view in promising to not attack another country it would be also wise to promise to not starve it if opportunity offers.

THE ODD-JOB SEASON

The summer is waning and winter approaching. Around every household there are odd-jobs to be attended to at this time of the year. The garden must be cleared up. The furnace and stove pipes are to be cleaned. The chimney needs cleaning, and perhaps repair. Storm windows and doors are to be overhauled, put in condition, and later on put in place. Alterations or repairs to house or fence or other matters have been left over from the spring campaign, or have made their head appear during the summer.

It is well to have these matters attended to before the weather breaks. There are, as there were last spring, many men in the city who would welcome a few hours work of this kind, probably at a broken rate, but were six months ago. Their need is quite as great as it was then, perhaps greater, with winter clothing and winter employment still scarce.

A couple of dollars paid to a man for doing such necessary work will be money well spent. The householder will get value in the work done. He will get still greater value in the satisfaction of helping to ease the troubles of some deserving fellow-citizen.

SYSTEMATIC SAVING

An article published in this column on Wednesday evidently gave some readers the mistaken impression that the Dominion Government pays the pensions which are received by federal civil servants after they retire from service. Such is not the case. The pensions are drawn from a fund into which the Government's employees pay five per cent of their earnings during their working years. The Government adds interest for the time the pensioner until it is paid. The pensioner thus gets back in instalments the savings he has made in former years.

Which of course means that any savings he has made was made; that those who are not civil servants need and deserve some pension system that will give them a more adequate support in old age than the $20 a month pension that is the maximum allowance under the present old age pension scheme. They cannot live a reasonable comfort on that amount of money, any more than the retired civil servant could do so.

Incidentally, the pension fund which the civil servants have built up by their contributions now amounts to some $39,000,000. The interest on this fund is enough to meet the claims last year. That is a rather striking illustration of what systematic saving can do for the future. It is a rather striking illustration of what would really banish the fear of want from the minds of Canadians generally as they look forward to the autumn days of life.

CONTRIBUTORY PENSIONS

A correspondent suggests that if everyone would follow the example of the Government upon federal civil servants, and deposited five per cent of his earnings with the Government throughout life, everybody could retire in old age with a fairly substantial pension. There is no doubt at all about that, making certain obvious reservations. Persons in private employ have not the same certainty of continuous employment, nor the same certainty of continuity of annual income, as a civil servant. At the present moment, to illustrate, there are several hundred thousand men in Canada who have no income at all, and another larger number whose present incomes no more than meet their day-to-day needs, leaving no margin at all to lay aside.

"So then I become your enemy by telling you the truth?"

Making these allowances, the point stands; that people generally could build up a substantial pension fund with uniformity to draw in old age if they followed this excellent rule. But the other important point is that most of them do not do it, and apparently will not do it voluntarily. Perhaps the civil servants would not do it if voluntarily either?

It seems quite probable that the national Government will in future have to adopt some such plan as a basis for the old age pension system, and demand that every earner pay over during his working years a fixed per centage of his earnings to the pension fund. These accumulated contributions, along with the grants now made by the Federal and Provincial Governments, would supply old age pensions for all, large enough to provide a decent living and free from any suggestion of charity.

THE KILLING OF JUMBO

On this date, in 1885, the world, especially the juvenile world, was grieved by the news that Jumbo, the greatest elephant in captivity, had been killed because he had been hit by a train at St. Thomas, Ontario, of which many old country newspaper readers heard for the first time.

children wanted to induce their boys and girls to do something

Contrariwise, had the children been told that if they did not do this, they should not have a ride on "Jumbo,"

The Passing Show

By J. S. Couper

An alarming epidemic of encephalitis—commonly called "sleeping sickness"—is ravaging in St. Louis, in the United States. Over two hundred people have been seen in St. Louis who have died in the effort to find out if the disease can be transmitted by the nose and mouth, a whole host of monkeys have been sent to St. Louis by the U.S. Public Health Service. Doctors will try and infect the monkeys through secretions of the nose and throat, and find if it can be transmitted in that way. The hope of encephalitis is said to have been that, by a doctor at Washington University. A whole lot of expensive experting will be done at the expense of the public and the other monkeys.

What the U.S. Public Health Service has not disclosed to the public—and will not if it can avoid it—is that encephalitis is transmitted by vaccination. St. Louis is one of the most highly vaccinated cities in the United States. The serum business is a highly profitable one for doctors. Rather than give up practicing the bloodstreams of healthy people with expensive pus from the noses of cows afflicted with encephalitis, the U.S. Public Health Service will try and find another serum to give to those who have developed encephalitis from the first.

Fortunately one doesn't have to rely on reasoning and common sense merely to support the claim that encephalitis is transmitted by vaccination. The knowledge is withheld from the people of St. Louis, those folk who care to read the journals and reports of the medical societies abroad, can read for themselves.

In Holland, owing to the spread of encephalitis, compulsory vaccination was abolished.

In the British House of Commons, Mr. R. Russell on Dec. 12, 1920, asked the Minister of Health the number of deaths reported to his department from encephalitis in the United Kingdom since the following vaccination. The question was definite and gave every opportunity for evasion. It was thus "known to have occurred."

The Minister, Mr. Greenwood, is reported as saying:

"My Department has information of 100 deaths from encephalitis reported during the period from Dec. 1922 to Sept. 1923."

Obviously only those cases where the death had been directly attributed to encephalitis following vaccination were thus listed. It is well known that many doctors have an aversion to attributing deaths to vaccination, and prefer to give the cause of death as septicæmia, or encephalitis without indicating the cause.

It was only two or three years ago that Dr. Simon Flexner of New York, in an address on "Encephalitis," before the American Medical Association, was congratulating himself that America had escaped the scourge. He said in part:

"I am glad to say that America should be alert to the general subject of encephalitis following acute infections, especially that which follows vaccination."

He told the Association of the "alarming report" from Czechoslovakia and Holland of children developing encephalitis after vaccination, and said "such lesions" by the name of post-vaccinal encephalitis." adding:

"Although cases have been reported from the United States. At first sight it would appear that America had been spared the scourge of encephalitis following vaccination. That is not true. Four cases have been reported from Baltimore and there are other unmistakable cases of encephalitis following vaccination in this country."

Dr. Flexner will have a great many more cases to add to his list as a result of the St. Louis outbreak.

So closely identified in the relation of cause and effect is vaccination and encephalitis that many doctors are so afraid of either offending or offending their friends or tolerating towards vaccination have recently joined the growing ranks of doctors opposed to vaccination. In the case of the St. Louis outbreak, the identity of cause and effect was so obvious that it was the product of vaccination. He not only told the members of the Royal Society of the danger of vaccination, but he also told them that he knew for how long an attenuated bacillus can lie dormant and then assume fatal virulence.

In the "Medical World" of March 29, 1920, Dr. Gordon Ward, once a rabid advocate of vaccination, in an article entitled "Against Infant Vaccination," announced himself as opposed to infant vaccination as a consequence of his study of its relation to encephalitis.

The people of St. Louis will not be afforded the information given in this column. Vaccination will still be forced or forced upon them. They are

Ald. James East Advocates Socialization Of Credit

Buying Power Must Be Restored To Get Revival In Industry

Destruction of Food Poor Statesmanship Speaker Tells Leagues

This industry cannot be revived until the buying power of the people is restored, which can only come through a change in the monetary system, and that this is the fundamental weakness of the National Recovery Act as it is at present applied in the United States was the statement of Ald. James East in an address at the regular monthly meeting of the Federation of Community Leagues Thursday evening.

When the new U. S. government first took office and set out to remedy conditions which had placed 12 million people out of employment, Ald. East told the meeting they considered socialization of credit as a solution but this was quickly rejected by the league's party of inflation; the money which is everybody's trouble.

The most backward part of the NRA program is the public works program, he said, adding that the inflation is caused by the looseness of the banks to supply the necessary money.

Mr. East felt that socialization of credit was necessary for the restoration of buying power and that it was futile to put men working in factories if there was no market for the products.

Destruction of food, which is being carried on in the United States, instead of trying to find methods of distributing it to the millions of hungry people, he felt that the special committee and from Lloyd E. Wood, chairman of the committee on the economy of the NRA.

Harvesting Operations Interrupted N.A.R. Reports States

Threshing of the Peace River crop has started, but is not yet general, according to the crop report of the Northern Alberta Railway for the week previous to Sept. 14, issued on Friday under the direction of John Callaghan, general manager. Rains have interrupted harvesting operations.

MRS. J. EAST

INJURED WHEN CAR DITCHED

A fire blowing out on the car she was driving west to Edmonton to visit a son, caused painful injuries to Mrs. James East, wife of Alderman East, on the Jasper highway, near Wabamungo Thursday evening. The car smashed into the ditch and Mrs. East, facing a possibility of broken ribs, in addition to many painful contusions and scratches.

Two passengers, Dr. Dan Kenney, of San Diego, Cal., a former 122nd street, city, were also involved in the crash and suffered a number of painful injuries. Mr. Gerbach is at the Royal Alexandra hospital. X-ray examinations have disclosed that none of the three have internal injuries.

The car, which was driven by Mrs. East, is badly damaged.

HUNTING SEASON NOW UNDER WAY

Cars crammed with khaki-clad hunters, faithful hounds and trusty carry-alls were seen out of the city on all roads Thursday night and Friday morning as the boys moved out to the hunting grounds in readiness for the opening of the duck season and Hungarian partridge season, which started at noon, Friday.

The early birds who left in the night and early morning went out as scouts to locate good hunting ground in readiness for the opening moment. It is not likely that there will be any shooting of ducks until the evening, however, and in the meantime the troops will get their finger fingers limbered up by going after the speedy Hungarian partridge.

All the best hunting sections are now being scouted by the boys and dealers have reported a heavy movement of shells, so that there ought to be plenty of noise and fun.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

"Is it right for heads of civic and government departments to shroud their operations in secrecy?" asked The Bulletin's Inquiring Reporter today. It is the public's business to know what his servants are doing? Below follow the statements gathered.

WILLIAM STEWART, restaurant proprietor: "These men get to think that they are married to their positions and are not to be questioned in their municipality or province. Right now I would like to know how the jobs on the highways near Lacombe are being allocated. I am not a knowledge and the talk of central Alberta, where I come from, that men having such employment are heads of big families—controlling ask and money and that they are without any firm or concrete political stand. They are the half way men who have no real standing in case of need for the consideration of a government. I think it is the public's concern to have the matter cleared up so far as we are all in the dark. Repeat my demands. I know have been made by interested parties and this information, but the efforts so far have been fruitless."

CLAYTON McLEAN, president of the Edmonton Young Liberals Association: "During the period of any administration be it civic, provincial or Federal, the public should be fully informed of the general business of the various departments. I think, I should say, that it is at present. This is especially true when large sums of money are expended or any public business done on a large scale. Had this rule been observed to the letter in the past, much of the bad feeling and resentment against the administration now in office, could have been avoided. Any suggestion of secrecy or any attempts to withhold or suppress public information leads to bad feeling, mistrust and suspicion on the part of the people."

PHILIP HARRIS, traveler: "It is a debatable question whether it seems to be that what the public doesn't know won't hurt it and so far not a great deal of tangible damage has been done. Up to recently people were content to let their public servants function and did not worry. Back in those good old prosperity days we were too busy making money to wonder what was going on in the administration of things. Hard times has turned everybody into a politician who thinks he can do a better job than those on the job can do."

GASOLINE PRICE PROBE UNLIKELY

Whether this city will follow the lead of Windsor, Ont. and ask for a probe into the Canadian gasoline business under the Combines Investigation Act, is not known, declared Mayor D. R. Knott on Friday. He did not think that such action would be taken.

Commenting on the matter, Mayor Knott said that it did not seem fair that Canadian consumers should have to bear the cost of U. S. activities in the United States and recalled that when the price war was being waged in the U. S. several years ago and the price per gallon was down to seven or eight cents Canadian consumers did not desire the same.

City Resident Grows Giant Strawberries

Old-time resident of this city, Mrs. M. Hoffman, 132 street, has won the admiration of fellow citizens by her ability to raise strawberries.

Always an enthusiastic horticulturist and gardener, Mrs. Hoffman, in May last, planted a bed of strawberries. On Friday morning she went to her garden and found the crop picked a beautiful cluster containing no fewer than nine berries, one of which was a large one that must have been a considerable consumption with the first from other parts.

The temperatures in North and Central China are similar to those in Canada, while South China is sub-tropical, similar to the British West Indies and Central America.
